GERMAN SUBMARINE

OFF THE COAST OF IRELAND

TORPEDOES U.S. LINER

WASHINGTON, May 26.—The United States steamship Nebraskan, of the American-Hawaiian line, flying the American flag, has been torpedoed off Fastnet Rock, Ireland, according to official reports from London this afternoon.

President Harold Sanderson of the International Mercantile Marine late this afternoon in London officially declared that the steamship was torpedoed by a German submarine. The ship was under charter to the concern of which Mr. Sanderson is the head, though owned by the American-Hawaiian Steamship Company.

"The Nebraskan was flying the American flag whe nshe was torpedoed," said Mr. Sanderson. "She was chartered by us to bring over a cargo, but was returning in ballast. The ship had not a single thing aboard which could possibly come under the German ban. The German action is astounding in view of the fact that the Nebraskan was flying the American flag and was bound for an American port."

2-ALARM FIRE IN ROXBURY; MANY SAVED

An explosion in a tank of pitch on the top floor of one of the big buildings of the Roessle Brewery, Roxbury Crossing, early today endangered the lives of more than a hundred brewery workers and gave the firemen one of the hardest fires to handle they have had for some time.

About 9:30 Patrolman Frank Gilman saw flames shooting out of the roof of the building which is of brick and six stories high. He yelled to the workmen, who quickly made their escape, and turned in an alarm from box 245.

When the firemen arrived they found it difficult to reach the fire on account of the peculiar situation of the brewery, which consists of a collection of buildings on a high hill. They quickly laid hose along Columbus avenue, Roxbury and Centre streets, but found it almost impossible to get water on the fire, on account of its height above the ground.

Chief McDonough was soon on the scene and on his arrival ordered a second alarm. After fighting their way through dense smoke from floor to floor the firemen finally reached the blazing tank and smothered the blaze. The fire started on the sixth floor and worked down, damaging the fifth floor. The other floors suffered a water damage. The damage is estimated by the police at $4,000.

ITALIANS PUSH ACROSS BORDER INTO AUSTRIA

By International News Service.
ROME, May 26. — King Victor Emanuel left for the front today to lead the Italian army against the Austrians.

By BRIXTON D'ALLAIRE.
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

ROME, May 26. — Striking rapidly at the Austrian frontier positions, the Italian army is winning all along the front, according to an official report from General Cadorna. Italian commander-in-chief, issued at the War Office today.

All the frontier passes in the Cadera district have been captured by the Italians, who have also occupied several more towns in Austrian territory.

The official reports of operations thus far received show that the Italians are moving forward along a front of about sixty miles. The Austrians thus far have not offered battle, continuing their retreat and destroying bridges to hamper the Italian army.

Austrian troops have blown up or set on fire sixteen towns and villages in their own territory to prevent their being used by the Italian troops, according to a news agency dispatch from the Italian frontier.

GENERAL CADORNA'S REPORT.

The report from General Cadorna follows:

News Creates a Sensation at Washington.

The Nebraskan was bound from Liverpool to New York in ballast. No one was injured, so far as known yet; and the vessel was afloat and returning to Liverpool this afternoon, although badly damaged.

The news that she had been torpedoed created a profound sensation at government departments today. The general impression was that it will affect the German-American situation acutely.

Secretary Bryan appeared greatly disturbed. He emphasized the fact that the department was without details of the affair and could not be expected to form an opinion on it until all the facts were known.

Official confirmation of the story came to the State Department from Consul General Skinner, at London. He cabled:

Admiralty reports American steamer Nebraskan, Liverpool for Delaware Breakwater, torpedoed forty miles south by west of Fastnet. Crew in boats standing by. Weather fine. No direct report yet.

NEBRASKAN SENT CALLS FOR HELP.

A similar dispatch, without the force of an official communication, however, came from Lloyd's Maritime Agency. It read:

The American liner Nebraskan was torpedoed off the Irish coast at 9:05 last night.

The Crookhaven wireless station has received the following:

The Nebraskan is calling for help. The crew are in their boats and are standing by. The weather is fine and calm.

Captain John S. Greene of the Nebraskan sent the following wireless dispatch to the company's offices in New York:

Struck either mine or torpedo forty-eight miles west of Fastnet, Ireland. No one injured. Have water in lower hold. Am steaming for Liverpool.

SHIP UNCONTROLLABLE.

Lloyd's later gave out the following:

Kinsale (it was off Kinsale the Lusitania sank) reports the American steamer Nebraskan passing eastward at 11:10 a. m. She is uncontrollable, but is under her own steam and is apparently bound for Liverpool.

The Admiralty announced later:

An armed trawler has reported the Nebraskan making

French Drop 203 Bombs in Great Air Raid

By FRANKLIN P. MERRICK.
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

PARIS, May 26.—A great air raid in which 203 bombs were dropped was made against German military depots on Tuesday by a mighty fleet of French aeroplanes, it was announced in an official communique given out by the French War Office today.

During night fighting has taken place in the Angres region (south of la Bassee and north of the Lorette Heights), in which the French not only held firm against the furious assaults of the Germans but also gained new ground.

Cuts Children's Throats and Own

NEW YORK, May 26.—After shearing her eight-year-old daughter and mortally wounding her six-year-old son by cutting their throats with a razor, Mrs. O'Neill, wife of a prosperous architect, cut her own throat and died today at her home on Eastern parkway, Brooklyn.

BOSTON BOAT RAMS RYNDAM IN THICK FOG OFF CAPE COD

With many passengers aboard the Holland-America liner Ryndam, bound from New York to Rotterdam, was rammed in a fog off Cape Cod early today by the Boston fruit steamer J. J. Cuneo with such terrific force that the Ryndam began to fill and it was necessary to transfer the passengers by the small boats to the Cuneo lest the Ryndam should founder.

It was first reported that some of the passengers were injured. Later report, coming from wireless messages picked up by coast stations said no passengers were hurt, so far as known.

The Ryndam is not seriously damaged, but the Cuneo's bow is stove in for ten feet from the water line, and the Ryndam's starboard bow is also damaged. The Cuneo was also leaking in New York and reported has not completed repairs.

The Ryndam is one of the passenger steamers operated by the Holland-American line, in which the French government has a large interest. It left New York on Saturday with a full list of passengers and a crew of 250 men.

The Cuneo is one of the fleet of fruit steamers operated by the United Fruit company. She left New York on Monday with a cargo of fruit and was proceeding to New York when the collision occurred.

TWO N. E. WOMEN PASSENGERS

Among the Ryndam's passengers are two from New England. They are Miss Cornelia Greenleaf of Rotterdam, Holland, who was returning home to Holland after a year's visit with her sister, Mrs. H. A. Hills of No. 362 Beacon street, Boston.

Miss Wilhelmina A. Bright of Pawtucket, R. I., a high school assistant, who was bound abroad for further study, also traveled second-class.

The collision occurred at 3:30 o'clock in the morning about ten miles east of Nantucket shoals lightship. The fog was not heavy. It was more like a vapor. It was not thick enough to obscure the moon, but it was enough to blanket the ocean for several feet up from the surface, so that it was impossible to see an approaching vessel.

The grave nature of the accident was reported in two wireless messages sent by Captain Van de Hoevel of the Ryndam to the Holland-American line offices in New York. The first message came thus:

"At 3:30 a. m. collision 3:30 a. m. with Cuneo. Making water. Steamer standing by—Hoevel."

At nine o'clock a second message came:

"8 a. m. 10 miles east Ambrose channel. Hold No. 3 full of water. Hold No. 4 water raising. Engine room flooded. We can master. Proceeding Fishers Island. Passengers and 250 of crew aboard Cuneo. American steamer standing by Hewell."

There was no official confirmation of dispatches regarding the number of passengers and crew aboard the Ryndam. First dispatches from New York today said the liner carried ninety passengers, number of crew not stated.

NUMBER ABOARD IN DOUBT.

Later dispatches said there were seventy-seven passengers and 250 crew on the Ryndam. Another dispatch to Boston said the Ryndam had seventy first and second cabin passengers and 175 steerage, a total of 245.

The Cuneo had a crew of twenty men under Chris Aamoot. The fruit steamer, which is only one-tenth the size of the liner Ryndam, is owned by W. W. & C. W. Noyes, fruit merchants of No. 15 South Market street, Boston. It left Boston at 1:30 yesterday for Bococa, Cuba, to bring bananas to Boston.

The Ryndam sailed from New York yesterday for Rotterdam. Coming since outside of Long Island it was off Cape Cod and headed eastward just as the smaller Cuneo, coming down by the long arm of the cape, was preparing to lay a course directly south to Cuba.

The most detailed reports which have come in so far from the collision were those which were picked up by the United States revenue cutter Acushnet, which lay at Woods for Liverpool with her fore hold flooded.

The Nebraskan is the first American liner torpedoed in the war zone. The Gulflight was a cargo ship. Though the Nebraskan is owned by the American-Hawaiian line, she is under charter to the United Transport line and flies the American flag.

The news that she had been torpedoed was received here with something like consternation. At the State Department, however, there was a disposition to await the report of Consul Frost at Queenstown.

Counsellor Lansing and other officials kept silence, observing the rule laid down by Secretary of State Bryan in cases involving serious international complications.

It was recognized, however, that the case may have the gravest consequence, if the torpedoing be established, and the responsibility placed on Germany, & would present what appears at first sight to be the most serious infringement of American neutral rights yet committed by the aKiser's government.

Hitherto the Germans have alleged that such attacks as that upon the Gulight and the Lusitania were justified by the fact that these vessels were taking munitions to allies.

But the Nebraskan carried only ballast, and she was bound—not for England—but for the United States. And the Nebraskan is the yet American liner to be torpedoed.

Since President Wilson's note to Germany, it had been believed merican ships were safe for the present at least.

This feeling of confidence was shattered by the report the Nebraskan had been torpedoed. The Glasgow Herald published the first report that the vessel had been torpedoed. According to this report she was attacked e Fastnet. The Herald stated that the crew had taken to the ats.

BOUND FOR DELAWARE.

The Nebraskan is expected to nch Liverpool tomorrow. She sailed from there May 24 for New York and the Delaware breakwater for orders to go un- der charter.

There were no passengers on hard.

The vessel has forty men in her crew. She is 360 feet long, of 1,408 tons gross tonnage. She was built in June, 1902, at Camden, N. J.

RAN ON BOSTON ROUTE.

She is well known in New York and Boston, and on the opening of the Panama Canal was put on service between Boston and the Pacific Coast via the Canal, being one of the first large vessels to pass through the waterway.

She was last in Boston on December, went from there to Savannah and loaded with cotton from Bremen.

She sailed from New York for Liverpool May 7.

The officers of the Nebraskan were: Captain John S. Greene; first mate, D. Sullivan; second mate, W. M. Fraille; third mate, W. H. Senior; chief engineer, F. C. Yandell; first assistant engineer, D. Williams; second assistant engineer, L. Parker.

passes near Cadera. The enemy bombarded Conquendolina without result during the night. We took Vallaforna pass with the bayonet.

"The enemy is retiring everywhere, destroying bridges.

"Our aviators threw bombs upon the electricity works and railway station at Monfalcone (16 miles northwest of Trieste).

"Our troops on May 24 took Monfalcone, Tomali, Ponte 10 Caffaro, Sagrado, the territory north of Ferrara, Monte Baldo, Monte Corna, Monte Foppiano, Passubio, Monte Rotondata at the extremities of the Arsa and Lagarina valleys and the high defiles of the Brenta valley. We made several prisoners.

"Along the Friuli frontier and the middle Isonzo, we continued successful on May 25. At Caporetta we disposed of the troops on the heights and won also Judrio and Isonzo. On the lower Isonzo we continued our offensive in order to reach the line of the river.

"Austrian artillery at Santa Maria, at Santa Lucia and southwest of Yelmino opened fire upon our positions on the heights of the Judrio and Isonzo, without result."

ROME WILD AT SUCCESS.

Wild enthusiasm has been caused here today by the official announcement of Italian successes against the Austrians. Cheers greeted Italian reservists as they assembled to receive their equipment. Among them were picturesque mountaineers and shepherds, who had rushed to the capital as soon as news of the declaration of war had reached the remote districts.

The military critics are pledged to make no comment on military operations, and therefore the newspapers print nothing but the official bulletins. These indicate that the advance of the Italian army was simultaneous at all points.

The Italian army now threatens not only the strategic road running through Tarvis, Tolmen and Goritza, but also the highly important Gorizia-Trieste highway.

In comparing the Austrian aerial and naval raids against the Adriatic coast with the Italian naval action at Porto Buso, military experts declare the Austrian efforts were undertaken solely for moral effect, whereas the operations of the Italian squadron were designed to achieve definite results, namely the destruction of motor boats and other light craft which had been assembled for duty against Italian forces defending Venice.

VENICE RAID A FAILURE.

Incendiary bombs were used by the Austrian aviators in their raid against Venice. The following eyewitness account of the attack was received here:

"It was about 3 o'clock in the morning when two long blasts from a ship's siren, followed immediately by the roar of guns in the forts, proclaimed that something unusual was afoot. There had been a big war concentrating during the forepart of the night and the city was sleeping soundly.

"Consequently it was some little time before the streets began taking on their daytime activity. Looking upward the people saw a crimson flash in the sky and immediately the searchlights of antiaircraft batteries burst forth. An aeroplane, sailing high in the air passed over the Grand bridge and dropped two incendiary bombs, but the damage from these was slight.

"This aeroplane then disappeared, but about 5 o'clock another appeared and began dropping missiles. Two of these were aimed at the Grand bridge, but missed, falling into the lagoon. Four others were dropped in rapid succession. While the attacks were under way the military authorities compelled the people to put out all the lights.

POPE LEANS TO ITALY.

It is reported on excellent authority that Pope Benedict has shown a sympathetic leaning toward Italy in the present struggle. The archbishop of Genoa has addressed a pastoral letter to the clergy which closes with these words:

"To our mortal eyes it would appear that God has not heard our prayers for peace and today our statesmen are pointing out that the road we must follow is the call to arms. The hour for our youth to make brave sacrifice for their country has arrived. Let us make them willingly and with the fortitude demanded by the present occasion. Meantime let us not forget that we are Christians."

SUBMARINE ATTACK DAMAGES AUSTRIAN CRUISER OFF POLA

By HENRY L. FERRY.

Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

GENEVA, May 26.—Two Italian submarines attacked the Austrian ships near Pola yesterday, fired eight torpedoes at merchant vessels and damaged an auxiliary cruiser, according to a dispatch from Laibach.

Details of naval engagements in the Adriatic have been cut short by the Italian censor. Vienna admits an Austrian torpedo boat was put out of commission and a cruiser damaged by Italian batteries during the attack on Porto Corsini.

It has also been made known for the first time that British warships are operating in the Adriatic in conjunction with the Italian fleet.

The captain of the Greek steamer Adriatione reports that he saw a fight Tuesday morning in the Adriatic between five Austrian destroyers and three Italian cruisers that were only five miles apart. The Austrian vessels followed a zigzag course and fired several broadsides, but the Italian made no reply, endeavoring instead to get nearer the Austrians. After the latter had kept up a continuous firing for twenty minutes they sped northward to Pola.

A late communication from Vienna thus describes a sea battle near Barletta, which is about 100 miles above Otranto, in the province of Bari, on the Adriatic:

"The cruiser Helgoland and three torpedo boat destroyers encountered two Italian torpedo boat destroyers near Baletta, one of which escaped, but the other of which was struck by a shell and compelled to surrender in a sinking condition.

"Our destroyers rescued 25 men of the crew of the Italian boat, including its commander, but the work of rescue was hindered by the appearance of two Italian battleships, which fired from a range of 9,000 meters (about six miles).

"In the ensuing skirmish our destroyer Csepel was slightly damaged, but the Helgoland and the other destroyers returned the enemy's fire with apparent success, and then retired out of range."

An Italian flight squadron made a descent on the Austrian coast at Buso, a seaport where forces were landed and the harbor works were destroyed, after overcoming slight resistance. Seventy prisoners were captured.

MAN STILL LOST ON WACHUSETT

PRINCETON, May 28.—The search for Dr. Charles LeRoy Richardson, a Cleveland, O., osteopath, who has been lost on Mount Wachusett since Saturday, has been without success. The doctor's father, William Richardson, from whom the young man wandered away as they were tramping through the wilderness, said that he has given up hope that his son is still alive.

The searchers included about 100 men of Princeton and the 40 men who are living at the Westminster camp. Some of these men found many footprints about the Haynes reservoir at the foot of the mountain, and that body of water will be dragged today on the assumption that the missing doctor committed suicide there.

Yo Ho, and a Bottle of Rum, Aet. 50, Found

Contractors who may be engaged to tear down old buildings in Washington expect to be able to get along without a salary list, depending on volunteers since the finding by workmen on the Stearns-Crehore Building, in Central square of a quart of rum and a quart of whiskey. Both were covered with the dust of half a century, safely tucked away in the partitions of the building.

Turning to a back page in one's menu card one finds it would cost forty cents to get a faint appreciation of the value of the find.

The Stearns-Crehore Building, which is being demolished to make room for a modern theatre and office building, was built in 1819, and was used first as a lodge room. In 1858 it was used as a church. During and after the Civil War days it was the scene of a good old-fashioned drinking place.

FEAR VERA CRUZ MAY BE ATTACKED

GALVESTON, May 28.—The glaring of searchlights around Vera Cruz, Mex., every night and the increased movements have given rise to fears that General Carranza's headquarters may be attacked, according to reports received here from Vera Cruz.

Bands of revolutionists have been drawing closer and closer, advancing and hoisting trains in and out of Vera Cruz, have been growing daily bolder. Meantime, preparations have been made for a possible move of General Carranza to the island of San Juan de Ulua in the harbor of Vera Cruz.

Stories of distressing conditions in the interior of Mexico are brought to Vera Cruz. At Orizaba rioters of women on recently filled the plaza and after hagging that the revolution be stopped, paraded the streets clamoring for food. Foreigners have been obliged to relieve the suffering.

Speed Requirements Exceeded by Cushing

ROCKLAND, Me., May 28.—The torpedo boat destroyer Cushing showed a wide margin over contract requirements on her official standardization run here today when she was driven at an average speed of 30.06 knots per hour, and the average of her five fastest runs was 30.14 knots per hour. The Cushing carried 100 per cent of her fuel supply and was equipped with her full complement of guns and torpedoes and was under the command of Lieut. Commander Ellis.

Woman Claims Dentist Let Her Swallow Tooth

BROCKTON, May 28.—Dr. Valentine Duff of Brockton is charged in the municipal court here with having swallowed a tooth which he was under the impression he had extracted from the mouth of Mrs. Sarah A. Morse of Brockton, according to the complaint sworn to by Mrs. Morse in the Superior court for the recovery of $5000 damages from the dentist.

Her husband, Frank Morse, has brought suit for $1,000 for money he contends he has expended for medical treatment for his wife.

Mrs. Morse alleges the tooth caused serious infection of the gums and about the lower, and cannot be removed. She claims to have suffered for months until she has suffered greatly in body and mind, and from nervousness and loss of sleep.

HEIRESS TELLS OF TANGO LIFE

By RUTH M. BYERS.

NEW YORK, May 26.—"A girl's best friend is her mother, and I never knew it before today." Eugenia Kelly, worn with the excitement and nervous strain of the last few days, made this simple statement in her new home awaiting by her mother's side.

"Every friend I had left me when I was in trouble. They whipped out of town, and had to face the whole miserable business alone. Those I had counted on, who had made such violent overtures of friendship while my money lasted—left suddenly without even telephoning me.

"Then for the first time I realized what mother and the older folks who knew meant when they talked of the folly of young friends and too many parties on Broadway.

"I'm disgusted with the whole lot of them. I made up my mind to go back to mother when I heard they were not standing by me. I don't think they ever intended to face court to help me out.

Here Mrs. Kelly explained that the strain the girl had been under for the past few days had unnerved her, and that the complete statement that she wanted to make would have to be made through her.

"I knew some of Eugenia's ups during the past few months," Mrs. Kelly said. "The whole dreadful episode is now a thing of the past and soon will be forgotten, I hope. But I want to tell you something of the story Eugenia has told me that it may help some other girl. I want other girls to see Broadway as it really is stripped of its glamour. It is the only reason I am telling you as much of what my girl has just told to me."

HOWITE SLL STARTED.

"It all started very harmlessly about sixteen months ago," Eugenia Kelly told her mother. "At that time we started to take our luncheons away from home, owing to temporary domestic plans. I often took girls to Delmonico's and Sherry's for luncheon while you dined at other places, but you always knew about my plans and made no objections.

"One afternoon I went to one of the prominent tango cafes and there I met Al Davis and Bonnie Glass. I danced that afternoon, and several times later without telling you anything about it. Then I took you there with me. I remember your displeasure, but it was much too late. I did not think anything of it at the time.

"You see, so much fun I never thought that it might end. Pretty soon I was going to the cafes with Davis and other men. We would take long automobile rides and end up at some cafe for dinner and dancing. Sometimes, however, Broadway was good enough for me, and the floor of one roof I started in to do the rather fancy high.

"I did not realize, however, that plans were being made with the idea of getting me money from me. I did not know much about the plans, but I managed to borrow money from a friend on a note. I knew now it was wrong, but those people seemed to have woven some kind of a spell around me.

"Money went pretty fast there for a time. Even then I did not tell where it all went to. All I know is that those people who enjoyed around while I spent money on them merrily melted into thin air.

"Dancing lessons, trips to Atlantic City and Broadway, women who had been my guests times without number, and others, all backed my principal adviser when he told me I could defy my mother, that I was of age.

"They did not play fair, and then after I had made my mother turn in desperation to the courts they left town. That's how much I could count on them in trouble. No wonder I am through with them and all their kind."

MISS KELLY AND MOTHER TO TAKE A LONG SEA TRIP

(By International News Service.)

NEW YORK, May 26.—Forsaken by her "fair weather" friends of the "Broad White Way," nineteen-year-old Eugenia Kelly, heiress to whom has forsworn the entire cabaret cult and has gone back to her mother, Mrs. Helen Kelly. The latter today fully withdrew the charges of incorrigibility and will take Eugenia so far from New York stilted dance personages as is possible and still remain in this country. They will leave for San Francisco in a few days.

Miss Kelly came into court a somewhat dark-eyed woman, quietly clothed, where the day before she had been a picture of startling color. Yesterday's dotted daggers at her mother's temper she submitted to her mother's caress and after they returned to seclusion in their apartment her pent up feelings gave way and she dropped herself upon her bed in a paroxysm of weeping.

"I feel the ultimo outlet between and feels she has been wrongly portrayed to the public was indicated after her consent in a reconciliation had been won by John P. McIntyre, by her sister, Mrs. Bessie Thomas, and by the latter's legal adviser, George A. Gillespie, when she said: "My mother has been told certain things about me and about my life that are not true. A jealous woman is at the bottom of this. This woman often called up my mother and gave her exaggerated accounts of my doings.

"I realize now that my mother was acting for what she thought was my best interest. It is painful to think that my mother thinks me an unnatural girl. There are certain things in my relations with her that I cannot discuss but I still have filial sentiments and respect for my mother. All that I can say is that in our future relations I will be guided by what happened in court."

NEW SEA ISSUE FOR U. S. AND BRITAIN

By THEODORE TILLER,
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—The international situation in so far as the United States is concerned, today appeared to be that:

This government has no official information as to when the German reply may be expected, although officials here accept as true reports that Germany desires another week before sending her reply to the Wilson note.

The conferences between the trade advisers of the reports of the British government are to be resumed following the clearing away of a misunderstanding which caused this government to halt these conferences last week.

TRADE CONFERENCES.

Great Britain, through its Foreign Office, has announced that it quite understands that the conferences and officials attended by the trade advisers of the State department do not commit the United States to the British order in council aimed at commerce with Germany. With this understanding the conferences will proceed.

The President in his talks with callers has made it plain that the controversy between this country and Great Britain regarding trading in non-contraband shipments is unsettled.

Constant pressure is being brought to bear in an informal way upon Great Britain with the hope that she will ameliorate conditions respecting American ships and cargoes and that the situation may be relieved of its friction.

The United States today faces another controversy with Great Britain because of the British Admiralty order specifying that neutral vessels must obtain permission to take the north route around the British Isles for Scandinavian countries. The government has asked Ambassador Page at London to ask the reason for the actions of Great Britain in attempting to close established high sea routes.

Officials here are unable to understand why neutral vessels should be prohibited from the use of navigation routes beyond the limits of territorial waters.

QUESTION OF SEA RIGHTS.

The German and Austrian ambassadors here, while making no comment on the British notice, are much interested in the reply which may be given to Ambassador Page, who is taking up the matter for the present in an informal way.

In German quarters the British attitude is regarded as involving sea rights quite as much as the German war zone proclamation.

This government will not become impatient, it is believed, at the delay of approximately another week in the German reply. Italy's entrance into the war, the officials here recognize, is for the moment paramount in the German mind, and the United States will grant a reasonable length of time for a reply which semi-official reports indicate will be conciliatory.

I., May 26.—The visitors of the old Dragon Cruiser Constellation to Newport as a permanent display and exhibit at the naval training station was celebrated by a reception at Fort Greene of revolutionary relic. Hundreds of school children and old ladies gathered to hear speeches by naval officers and others.

Champ Clark Denies Bryan Wedding Snub

MONTGOMERY, Mo., May 26.—Speaker Champ Clark denied the story printed to the effect that Secretary of State Bryan has been intentionally left off the list of public men already invited to attend Miss Genevieve's wedding June 30. He says the list of guests has not been completed.

2 Rangers Missing After Border Fight

VALENTINE, Texas, May 26.—While on a scouting trip along the Rio Grande six miles south of here, a party of United States mounted customs inspectors and State Rangers were fired upon by a force of Mexicans. The Mexicans drove the Americans from their position and captured the latters' horses. Two inspectors are missing.

BIG PIANO SALE

J. P. Collins

Boston's Piano King

Crowned King of Low Prices and Big Sales

"I Hold Piano Quality Up and Piano Prices Down"

J. P. COLLINS

I DO not handle cheap pianos. I carry only the best makes and no cheap, inferior instruments ever get any consideration from me. I have built up a reputation for square dealing in the piano business that I would not sell or forfeit for all the money in the world. People from all over New England send me money and ask me to pick out a good piano for them. They put it up to me and I treat them just like I would have them treat me. The Golden Rule has been my guiding star in business. I aim to make friends of all my customers, and I succeed. My customers invariably send their friends to me to buy pianos. The piano manufacturers of this and other big cities attribute my success in the piano business to some remarkable business qualities that they think I possess—I attribute what success the people have helped me to attain to my following the Golden Rule in business—"Do unto others as you would have others do unto you."

Included in This Sacrifice Sale of Pianos Are the Following New Uprights:

The new GABLER UPRIGHT, an exceedingly fine piano from an artistic and material point of view.

THE BRIGGS PIANO—Very well known in this part of the country as a musical instrument par excellence.

THE MERRILL PIANO—This fine artistic creation needs no praise from me; it is famous among the best musicians and has years of high character behind it.

BECKER SENTENCED TO CHAIR, WILL APPEAL TO SUPREME COURT

ALBANY, N. Y., May 26.—Lieut. Former Police Commander Charles Becker must die in the electric chair unless the contemplated appeal to the United States Supreme Court be sustained by the governor of New York or unless a new trial is granted him.

The Court of Appeals, which yesterday, refused to grant Becker a new trial, today fixed that time for the execution.

Though the Court of Appeals has ended the hope of former Lieutenant Becker, as far as the New York courts are concerned, his second conviction of the murder of Herman Rosenthal during the week beginning Monday, July 12.

The Court of Appeals, which, yesterday, refused to grant Becker a new trial, today fixed that time for the execution.

Though the Court of Appeals has ended the hope of former Lieutenant Becker, as far as the New York courts are concerned, his second conviction of the murder of Herman Rosenthal during the week beginning Monday, July 12.

The Court of Appeals, which, yesterday, refused to grant Becker a new trial, today fixed that time for the execution.

It is the contention of Becker's attorney, Martin T. Manton, that the convicted man's constitutional rights were violated by the admission of improper evidence at his second trial.

WIFE DISAPPEARS.

Following the news that her husband had been denied another trial, Mrs. Becker, who is a teacher, obtained a twenty-four hours' leave from the school authorities and disappeared.

Reports from Sing Sing say that Becker was so upset by the news that he refused all food. His first words were unfavorable to his wife, who has been loyal to him throughout all his troubles.

Becker's fellow prisoners in the death house tried to cheer him, but with little success. He acted like a man who has relinquished all hope.

"I still had hope," Becker finally said. Becker was standing at his cell door when Deputy Johnson entered the death house. The deputy's solemn countenance told the condemned man plainly what to expect.

"Well, Charley, I have some news for you," Johnson said. Becker paled, but asked firmly: "What is it?"

"The decision of the lower court has been affirmed," Johnson replied.

Becker showed no emotion at that time, but inquired for the details. Johnson told him that with one exception the Court of Appeals had decided against his petition and Becker wanted to know who the exception was and, when told, made no comment.

"There are several newspapermen outside," Johnson told Becker, "do you will take any statement you wish to make. Do you want to send them any word?"

"No," Becker replied, retiring to the solitude of his cell. "I have nothing to say."

"I suppose she has seen the papers by this time," he said. "And I am worried about her. She has been so good to me."

Just before the close of the school session Mrs. Becker was called to the telephone. She hastened to it eagerly, to be met by the news that the new trial had been denied. There was a pause, then Mrs. Becker asked that the telegram from Albany be read to her.

"I cannot comment on the news now," she said, hesitantly.

"Will you try to get a stay from Governor Whitman?" she was asked.

"I have nothing to say," she gasped, her voice showing how hard she was striving for control. "I have nothing to say."

Mrs. Becker's sister believes she has come to Sing Sing to see her husband.

The Court of Appeals' opinion was written by Chief Justice Bartlett and Judges Hiscock, Collin, Cuddeback and Cardozo concurred in the opinion. Judge Hogan wrote a dissenting opinion.

The decision affirms the conviction of Becker for having instigated the shooting of Rosenthal. The opinion analyzes every feature of the mass of evidence. For the crime for which Becker must die four men have already paid the death penalty. They were the gunmen Lefty Louie, Whitey Lewis, Gyp the Blood and Dago Frank.

ARGUED IN MARCH.

It was contended that Becker, who had differences with Rosenthal, wanted to get rid of him as Rosenthal was about to relate a story to the then District Attorney, Charles S. Whitman, concerning gambling in New York city.

The prosecution at both trials and during the arguments on the appeal made strong points of this, alleging that Becker had the best motive in the world for wanting to close the mouth of Rosenthal.

The case was argued in the Court of Appeals, the second time, on March 24 last. It took two days for the court to hear it.

Mrs. Becker sat in the court room listening to the arguments that were put forth in behalf of her husband as well as the contentions of Assistant District Attorney Taylor that the second conviction of Becker should stand.

Assistant District Attorney Taylor paid considerable attention to the so-called Herbie conference. He declared that Marshall, who came up to Albany to testify in the case, was not an accomplice, and he insisted that his testimony connecting Becker with the case by putting him at the spot where the murder plot was hatched.

All the personal property and the Brookline estate goes to Mrs. French. The remainder is placed in trust.

Upon Mrs. French's death, $5,000 goes to Massachusetts Institute of Technology; $1,000 to the Boston Society of Civil Engineers; $1,000 to the Appalachian Mountain Club, and $1,000 to the trustees of the endowment fund of the Harvard Church of Brookline.

Malden to Get a Fleet of 25 Jitney Busses

Malden is to have a fleet of twenty-five jitney busses, the Aldermen having granted that number of licenses, a record for a Massachusetts city or town.

It is believed some of the licenses were taken out by men acting for others, so that when the machines are put in operation the number of owners will be considerably lower. Each owner must file a bond of $10,000 for each jitney bus operated, to cover indemnity in case of any personal injury or property damage caused by the buses.

STATE-WIDE FILM CENSORSHIP BILL PUT OVER TO NEXT SESSION

The Ways and Means Committee of the Senate today unanimously reported to defer until the next session of the General Court all bills relating to State-wide moving picture censorship.

This postponement pleased film distributors and exhibitors, who had feared that the Lowell bill might be passed in the face of their opposition.

The tremendous political power of moving pictures has been revealed in recent censorship agitation due to opposition to "The Birth of a Nation."

Like most big discoveries it was accidental. Although quite limited as to the result, promises great, recently magnificent was given at a hearing before the Ways and Means committee of the senate.

One of the debaters was rather startled to it was true that the film people had attended in force on slides bearing the pictures of every legislator who voted contrary to the wishes of the motion picture men.

This startling happened to be the witness. He showed no surprise at the interrogation. He explained that he knew nothing of the matter, and had nothing of the sort. He stated further that the distributors and exhibitors of films were very practical business men and very sane and fair.

The Senator in question insisted that the report came to members of the committee on "good authority." What to more, he and other members of the committee thought they were exceedingly disturbed over the matter. They asserted the picture threat had been freely circulated in the corridors of the State House.

It turned out to be only a rumor, but a valuable one from the standpoint of the motion picture managers. Even the keenest among them didn't grasp the significance of the incident until later, and then not until they began to talk it over. It was a woman among them who first sensed the full force of the opposition and who glimpsed the possibilities. She called it an "inspiration." Many exploiters of motion pictures now agree with her.

The concern shown by the members of the Senate Ways and Means Committee was recalled. Note was made of it. The film men began to realize the power of their ranks and of effectively and legally lend. The fuse crystallized right here in Boston. Something big is bound to develop from the State House rumor.

There can no longer be any doubt that the day is not far distance when political campaigns will be fought on the screen. The film will replace the stump. Arguments will be presented in picture form. Principles will be visualized and the records of office-holders, who have been unique to their oaths and their constituents, will be placed before countless eyes.

Every "movie" theatre could be turned into a rally headquarters in the best of a campaign. Reforms could be advocated in a manner that would leave no doubt.

Likewise the average person is more easily interested, instructed and convinced by pictorial argument than by circulars or in the worn, hearse rolers of fatigued candidates and their retinues of spongers who will not be obliged to waste their physical and vocal powers and hazard their health by motorized tours in unfavorable weather.

These are only a few suggestions in the rough of an idea that will be rounded out and perfected in time. The new factor will unfold the far-reaching political influences of the films.

It doesn't require a very elastic imagination to conceive how effective civic reform could be agitated on the motion picture screens and how effectively too, all crusades for the public weal could be carried out.

Nor is it difficult to fancy the panic in which the grafter would recoil and the hesitant politician cringe from the exposure, the most searching and terrible to the guilty mind. This will come. The distributors and exhibitors of films control a power greater than they realized. The power of the press is too well known for comment, but what potential twain the newspaper columns and the films would make in the fight for right against political corruption. In the warning that office holders must keep merit and be guided only by their duty.

What a mighty force in promulgating and demanding clean, wholesome laws, in purifying politics, educating voters and for the general uplift.

Governor Walsh's Condition Improves

Governor Walsh, who is confined to his room at the Hotel Lenox by an attack of tonsilitis was reported to be improved today.

The Governor had a fairly restful and comfortable night and his secretary, Thomas H. Connolly, said his condition is generally improved. We expect he will be at the State House during the latter part of the week.

FACE FULL OF ITCHING PIMPLES

And Blackheads. Itching and Burning Almost Unbearable. So Disfigured Ashamed to Go Out. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Healed.

63 Merrill St., Brooklyn, N. Y.—"Pimples and blackheads began to come on my face. A few weeks later my face was full of them. They looked like big blotches. The itching and burning that the pimples caused me would be hard to describe. It was almost unbearable and I was so disfigured that I was ashamed to go out. I could hardly sleep at night they hurt so.

"I tried many remedies but all failed to help. I had the trouble for about three years when I saw a Cuticura advertisement in the paper, and started to use them. I was surprised to see the result. In a month my friends could hardly recognize me I was so much changed. Before going to bed I would bathe my face in warm water with Cuticura Soap, dry it and put the Cuticura Ointment on. Cuticura Soap and Ointment healed me in three months." (Signed) Hyman Novins, August 7, 1914.

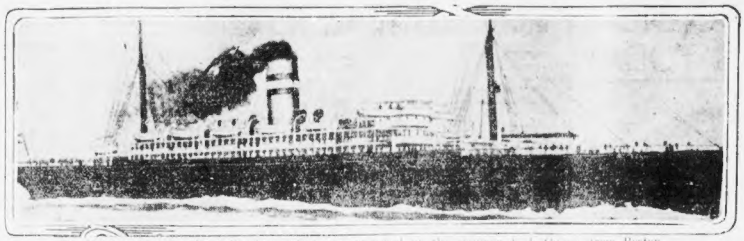
DAMAGED STEAMERS ON WAY TO NEW YORK



The Holland-America liner Ryndam, which was towed in by the steamer J. L. Luckenbach from Boston.

flag and which heard the messages passed from the scene of the accident.

Boats Help.

Boats that rescued the passengers of the Ryndam on the way to Boston said that the Ryndam was not in danger of sinking, but that the passengers were frightened by the shock of the collision, were suffering from their staterooms. One report said that the passengers were "panic stricken," but it is evident that there would need little "rousing" after such a terrible bump as the Ryndam had received.

Captain Van der Heuvel's message to the owners of the vessel, the Holland-America line, reported that the vessel was leaking, but that Captain Van Der Heuvel was confident that he could make port. The message from Captain Van Der Heuvel to the owners said that the passengers were all safe and that the vessel was proceeding under her own steam.

Wireless Operator on Duty.

The wireless operator on the Ryndam was never below his instruments for hours. These messages were picked up by every radio station on the coast from Chesapeake Bay to Cape Cod to Sandy Hook. They were also heard by the United States naval vessels engaged in Spring manoeuvres off the North Atlantic coast.

The battleships Texas, Louisiana and South Carolina started full speed for the scene.

The passengers of the Ryndam, rescued and undoubtedly frightened by the shock of the collision, were suffering from their staterooms. One report said that the passengers were "panic stricken," but it is evident that there would need little "rousing" after such a terrible bump as the Ryndam had received.

Captain Van der Heuvel's message to the owners of the vessel, the Holland-America line, reported that the vessel was leaking, but that Captain Van Der Heuvel was confident that he could make port. The message from Captain Van Der Heuvel to the owners said that the passengers were all safe and that the vessel was proceeding under her own steam.

Ryndam Is Towed In.

The Ryndam, according to the detail from Woods Hole, was so badly flooded that it could make only seven knots an hour at first. But Captain Van Der Heuvel had his pumps working so promptly that the water flow was reduced with the result that he was able to increase its pace to thirteen knots an hour.

At 10 o'clock the New York office of the Holland-America line received a wireless message from Captain Van der Heuvel stating that he was 115 miles off Ambrose lightship channel and was making for Boston. The Ryndam is one of the largest vessels of the Holland-America line, being 615 feet long, sixty-two feet wide and has a tonnage of 15,000. She was built in 1901 and is one of the slowest boats plying between New York and Amsterdam. She is 600 feet long, sixty-two feet wide and her tonnage is 7,967. She has nine watertight bulkhead compartments and is fitted with ample lifeboats and rafts.

The Joseph J. Cuneo is one-tenth the size of the Dutch liner, a small steamer carrying fruit between the West Indies and Boston. She is 250 feet long, thirty feet wide and her tonnage is 800. She flies the Norwegian flag, and belongs to W. H. and O. W. Nones, Boston.

Changes and Improves In Every Way the Credit Order Business

On the Department and Other Big Stores

$1.00 A WEEK

Means that women may pay their accounts on Department and other stores to Edwards at that rate if they use Edwards shopping check to make their purchases.

He Asks All Women to Read His Story as Written Below

Use Edwards Authorized Shopping Check System

When he opened the Edwards Credit Co. it was for the purpose of giving the people the most up-to-date credit order service. He carefully examined all existing order systems, retaining all that was good in any other system—discarding what was objectionable to the people, and succeeded in creating a new service—The Edwards Shopping Check System—that is far in the lead of all others.

Orders have been given on the retail stores of Boston for 35 years. There is nothing new in the order business but the name a house may give to the piece of paper they write the order on. No matter what you call it, it is simply an order. The order business is as old as the hills. No house in this city, or this country, can claim to have originated the order business; if so, many of the older credit houses would have a much better claim than any house starting to issue orders long after they did.

We name our new order a "Shopping Check," which does all that any order can do—and more.

We have completely changed the old style order system and improved it greatly by giving the public a far better service, with greater shopping facilities, than any other order system possesses. Edwards Shopping Check System is now the recognized, authorized and official credit medium on Boston's great retail stores that accept his "SHOPPING CHECK" as cash, representing 100 big cash stores in Boston in all lines of business, and extending throughout New England cities and towns. Over $40,000,000 worth of merchandise may be selected by our customers from the goods in these Big Cash Stores, and they are permitted to pay their bills to Edwards at the rate of $1.00 a Week.

Edwards has raised the Standard of the Credit Business by placing his customers on the same high plane enjoyed by the customers of the big retail stores who pay cash for their goods.

The improved methods of the Edwards Credit Co., combined with the co-operation of Boston's and New England's greatest stores, make the Edwards Shopping Check the greatest credit medium ever offered the people of this or any other city.

Private Entrances for Ladies and Private Offices for all customers, where charge accounts for goods in the cash stores may be opened in strict confidence, without the slightest embarrassing investigation or publicity.

Finest equipped and best credit establishment in America. Most centrally located credit offices in Boston. Right in the centre of Busy Boston's Shopping District. Most Convenient Order House in Boston.

PROTEST OVER POOR CONDITION OF BOSTON STREETS GAINS GREAT IMPETUS

Delay in Repairs Shown to Cost Traffic Men and Taxpayers Large Sums.

Today the AMERICAN prints a big fact about Boston streets which points a big moral.

The fact is this:

Boston's bad streets have cost and are costing owners of motor trucks many thousands of dollars.

Because of these deplorably bad streets it costs far more to maintain a motor truck in Boston than in any other large city in the country.

This is only one of the many facts about bad streets that hits home.

But it's a mighty strong fact. It is a significant fact. It shows in a thing just how costly to business men are Boston's bad streets.

As an instance, take the American Express company. This company is one of the largest operators of motor trucks in Boston. It runs fifty motor trucks in the city.

This company's experience has been and is that not only are Boston streets the most unsatisfactory of any large city in the country, but that the cost of upkeep of the motor truck is very, very much greater here than in any other large city in the United States.

GOOD STREETS A SAVING.

Very similar has been the experience of the Clearing House Parcel Delivery Company.

This company is also one of the largest operators of motor trucks in Boston. It runs fifty motor trucks.

Its experience is that it costs much more to maintain motor trucks in Boston than elsewhere because of the inferior condition of this city's streets.

The American Express Company, to cite a special instance, finds that it costs very much more for the maintenance of motor trucks here than in New York city.

The company has motor trucks in both cities.

But New York streets are kept in splendid condition. Boston's streets are just the opposite, and such is the effect that repairs and other upkeep costs to motor truck owners here are skyhigh compared to the maintenance cost in other cities.

These truths, it was explained, operate under equal service conditions in the express business in the various cities, but under vastly different street conditions in Boston.

Good streets, in other words, save money to motor truck owners.

Good streets also save money to automobile owners and owners of all vehicles of all kinds.

Good streets in the long run save money to the city itself.

Better streets for Boston will mean a huge saving of money all round. Which points out a big moral.

Let Boston better its streets at once.

YOU CAN HELP.

You can help. The AMERICAN is leading the fight for better streets for the city. You can aid by personally demanding immediate action in street improvements—by making this demand heard where it will do the most good.

Don't forget the mass meeting on Friday night. Jot the date down. The meeting is called for City Hall. Be there promptly. The hour is 8 p. m.

So great is the public interest in the city's street problem that Mayor Curley announces he is ready to hold the meeting at the Parkman bandstand on the Common if the crowd is too large to get into City Hall.

But go to City Hall. From there, if the gathering is sufficiently large, you will go to the Common. But go to City Hall—first, to swell the numbers, and second, to be ready to voice your demand for immediate action in street improvements.

In addition to various organizations, many individuals have received invitations from the Mayor to speak on the street question. One of these is Charles Herbert Davis of Boston, president of the National Highway Association, and known all over the country as an authority on good roads and streets.

The Mayor has sent out 5,000 personal invitations to attend the meeting. He has issued this statement:

MAYOR'S STATEMENT.

In a message submitted to the City Council, February 23, I requested the members of the council to join with me in a petition to the Legislature for authority to increase the present tax limit in order that sufficient additional money be made available to provide necessary street improvements.

The City Council having failed to act upon this recommendation, under date of May 17, an order was duly presented authorizing the city to borrow $500,000 for street improvements, which payment to be provided by the issue of bonds for a five-year period.

Personally, I have opposed the borrowing of money for work of the character named, but the present condition of the streets arising from the laying of high pressure fire service mains and the fact that 320 miles of streets are of macadam pavement and unsuited for automobile traffic in my opinion creates an emergency sufficient to warrant the issuance of a loan.

The Boston Finance Commission is of the opinion that the present emergency is not sufficient to warrant the issue of such loan and the City Council are still considering the proposal.

If in your opinion the streets in your neighborhood or the highways generally should be improved at once, I trust you can find it convenient to attend a meeting at the Council Chamber, City Hall, upon Friday evening, May 28, at 8 p. m., when the entire subject will be open for discussion.

MAKE YOURSELF HEARD.

The AMERICAN is interested in your attending this mass meeting simply to have you express your demand for instant action. Whether you agree with the Finance Commission or the Mayor is not the question.

The AMERICAN is anxious to see something done toward better streets for Boston. Those who use the streets every day, those who see the streets every day, realize this need of immediate action.

If you are interested, as undoubtedly you are if you are a Bostonian, then attend this meeting—go with the firm purpose of pushing against quibbling and time-wasting and with the determination to add your demand to that of others for beginning street betterments at once.

If money is needed, then let means be found to provide the funds.

But the vital thing is to START NOW.

Today is the time set for the special meeting of the Elevated directors to consider President Bancroft's recommendation that the road begin its share of the repaving work on Summer street by next Saturday at the latest.

The minute the Elevated begins, the Transit Commission will begin its share of this repaving.

This is well and good so far as it goes. But it is only one street out of many that need instant attention. Miles upon miles of Boston streets are in bad shape, and need fixing. Some need reconstruction. The way to get something started is for YOU, Mr. and Mrs. Bostonian, to attend Friday night's meeting and make yourself heard for immediate action.

CAUSES MONEY LOSS.

The condition of many of the streets is a disgrace to the city. Lately there have been numerous cases of horses being injured by stumbling because of the holes in the streets. One animal so hurt had to be shot.

Not long ago a piece of fire apparatus, responding to an alarm, was halted by the breaking of an axle. The wheel came into a street-car crossing and the axle was snapped off short.

A good street would have saved the city the cost of repairing that axle.

Every day sees a similar useless waste of money. Business suffers, motorists and motor trucks suffer horse-drawn vehicles and horses all suffer.

And the city's reputation is bound to suffer. It should be a matter of civic pride with every Bostonian that the city should have at least decent streets. What will visitors to Boston, who will come in great multitudes in the summer season, think of Boston after once seeing or traveling over the streets? What sort of an impression of our city will they carry away with them?

There is every reason why the city should not only have good streets, but should try to have the best streets possible.

There is absolutely no reason why the streets should be permitted to remain in their present deplorable condition.

You, Mr. Business Man, having a vital interest in better streets, should attend the meeting Friday night and speak for immediate action.

Every owner of an automobile should attend.

Every owner of a motor truck should attend.

Every master teamster should attend, whether motor-driven or horse-drawn whether motor-driven or horse-driven whether motor-driven or horse-should attend.

DEMAND ACTION.

Let every citizen who has the good of Boston at heart attend.

Attend, and make known your attitude for immediate improvement of the present lamentable street conditions. Make your statement short, but strong. Urge with all the vigor you possess that something be done immediately. Place emphasis on this fact—that the citizens of Boston will not be content with quibbling, or time-wasting, or promises, or words, or argument.

Make it a united demand for action, and that at once.

Boston's streets are now the worst

Mayor Sends 5,000 Notices of Meeting Friday to Discuss Remedy of any large city in the United States. Contrast them with the streets of other cities and you will note the great difference, always to the discredit of Boston.

The AMERICAN, in its efforts to have the city get better streets, is printing photographs of these streets. Today is printed a photograph of West street, near Washington.

Contrast it with the photograph printed of a Chicago street.

The street shown is not the best street in Chicago, but it is a good street. And Boston's streets are pretty generally nowadays all bad streets.

It should be Boston's ambition to have not only equally good streets as Chicago, but better streets than that city or any other city in the country. Just now the city of Boston falls sadly short of that ambition. Boston at present occupies the tailend of the roll of honor for good streets.

TIME IS NOW.

You can contrast Boston's streets with the streets of any other large city, and the other cities are certain to get the laurels with ease. And it will be so until Boston begins improving its streets.

The time to start is NOW.

Do your share by attending the mass meeting and coming out strong for immediate action.

At no other seasons of the year is scientific tailoring put to so strong a test as with Spring and Summer clothes. If your cold weather, clothes are not warm enough, you put on a heavy overcoat.

But when the warmer days are here, and the overcoat is discarded, you look for light-weight clothes—and the lighter they are, the greater your comfort.

But—and here is where the test comes: partly lined or totally unlined clothes are the greatest tax upon tailoring skill.

To hold their shape, such clothes must be of pure wool, hand-tailored in the vital parts, and skilfully put together with brains as well as thread and needle.

And last, but not least, the cloth must be shrunk "to the limit." You get these features in

Suffragists to Halt Campaign on Memorial Day

There is no political activity on the part of the woman suffrage workers throughout the State on Memorial Day. The following letter has been sent to Department Commander Knowles:

Comrade Alfred H. Knowles, Department Commander, G. A. R.

The Massachusetts Woman Suffrage Association has decided that no political activity will interfere with their tribute to the sacredness of Memorial Day. And there are no additional calls for related leagues throughout the State.

The battle for and against woman suffrage is being waged fiercely, but the day that pays its solemn respects to those who died that the slaves of the South might be given their political liberty holds such special significance for the women of Massachusetts at this time, that they feel it should not be marred in any way.

Yours most sincerely,

MASSACHUSETTS WOMAN SUFFRAGE ASSOCIATION.

By GERTRUDE HALLADAY LEONARD,

Chairman Executive Board.

A party of prominent suffragists, including Mrs. Leonard, will pay a visit to the resting place of Julia Ward Howe in Mt. Auburn, and leave an appropriate floral tribute, consisting of a large pillow with the words "Mine Eyes Have Seen the Glory" upon it. They will then drive to Forest Hills Cemetery and place a wreath on the grave of Mrs. Lucy Stone Blackwell.

NOW

IS THE TIME TO WORK

Series "E" Starts Today

Well, here we are started on Series "E," and thirty-eight days from now, the collection of coupons, as far as the American's California Tours Contest is concerned, will be a thing to talk about. The "doing" will be over.

The enthusiasm of those in the battle to win the twenty-five wonderful trips to the California Fairs is too keen and the ambition to be successful too sincere to allow of any loitering by the wayside or "putting off" of vote-gathering activity.

NOW—TODAY, is the time when the work of gathering votes will count, and those who realize this to the fullest extent will be the ones to take the trips to the coast and back as the guests of this newspaper.

Keep before you the fact that for over three weeks you will travel, expense free, care free, trouble free, worry free, and enjoy the finest scenery along the route from here to the Golden West.

Keep in mind the fact that $1,250 in cash will be divided among the winners for additional spending money on the tour. They really will not need this money, because every possible expense will be taken care of by this newspaper, but it helps make the prizes even more attractive.

Spur your friends on to greater effort—the result will justify all the work you put into this contest.

The first vote standing will appear in next Sunday's American. It will include all votes polled in Series "A" and Series "B." The second vote standing will be printed two weeks from next Sunday, June 13, and will be a record of all votes polled in Series "A," Series "B" and Series "C."

WHITNEY WILL WITNESS TELLS ABOUT KISSING

Miss Laura D. Whitney (at left), niece of late T. D. Whitney, who will testify at trial of his will, and Mrs. Amy H. Barker, who, witnesses say, was kissed by Whitney.

WHITNEY KISSED HER, SAYS GIRL

That Theodore D. Whitney, the deceased Boston merchant, was accustomed to kissing young girls in his private office at the store, was the principal point brought out today at the contest over his will before Judge Fox.

Miss Sarah L. Hoskins, a pretty girl who gave her age as twenty-six, is the one who told of osculatory episodes with Mr. Whitney in the store on Temple place. Miss Hoskins now lives in Hampton, N. H., where Mr. Whitney's cottage was, but she now lives in Concord, N. H. Miss Goodkind said:

"I used to call on Mr. Whitney in his private office. He used to often kiss me and give me money presents. He told me during the time he would call me back and give me money. Once when I was going to school he gave me ten dollars. He gave me money also for my music lessons."

Q.—Would he always kiss you when you visited him? A.—Almost invariably.

MATTER OF CUSTOM.

Never in the store.

Q.—You made it a custom to kiss him in the office? A.—I was accustomed to kiss him in the office.

Q.—How long did you stay in the office? A.—Ten minutes.

Q.—Private office? A.—Yes. I also used kiss him in the cottage. I used kiss Mrs. Barker in the cottage. He most always used to kiss Mrs. Barker.

Q.—Did you smell liquor on his breath when he was kissing you? A.—I think so.

Miss Goodkin said he would generally talk of his wife after kissing her. Sometimes she used to call on him two or three times a day. Once Mr. Whitney gave her sister money for a dress. She said she never saw him kissing Annie Mahoney.

DRANK WITH HIS CLERKS.

Howard M. Lamper of Hampton, N. H., for twenty years an employe at the Whitney store, gave some sidelights on the drinking propensities of Mr. Whitney. He said Mr. Whitney used to set everything in the store on occasion, even to sweeping. His specialty was dressing the windows in, which he had the assistance of Mr. Lamper. On these occasions, the witness said they used to send over to the Thorndike for a bottle of whiskey.

Q.—There have been times when you and Whitney took a drink together? A.—Lots of times. There was always more or less whiskey about.

Q.—Did Mr. Chapman learn whiskey drinking from Mr. Whitney? A.—No. It came natural.

This answer caused a ripple of laughter in the courtroom. Even the Judge smiled. The witness said that Mr. Whitney promised to swear off drinking and take up chewing tobacco instead.

Frederick R. Batchelder, a nephew of Mr. Whitney, testified that he heard Mr. Whitney say: "I can't be left alone with Mrs. Barker."

Joseph T. Brown, chairman of the Board of Selectmen; Warren F. Hobbs, storekeeper, and Albert L. Joplin, carpenter, all of Hampton, N. H., testified they saw nothing improper in the relations between Mr. Whitney and Mrs. Barker.

"THE GODDESS"

By GOUVERNEUR MORRIS and CHARLES W. GODDARD

By Gouverneur Morris and Charles W. Goddard

Copyright, 1915, by the Star Company.

THE crossing from the island to the mainland was made in silence. The two golden navigated the old dug-out in the calm wales almost awash; and when Smellsagood hoisted himself astride ing a compact portable bundle of Tommy's clothes, which he had the forethought to steal, and wandering how much he could get for them in cold cash; Celestia absent-mindedly trailed one hand overboard, and Professor Stilliter, his eyes on the back of her head, thought long thoughts.

Since her emergence from that imaginary heaven which nothing could persuade her was imaginary, Celestia had proved less manageable than he had expected. He thanked his stars that she had taken a sudden fancy to running away with Tommy rather than with some other young man.

He disliked Tommy for three good reasons. Tommy disliked him, and twice Tommy had gotten the better of him. Twice Tommy had knocked his glasses off, rendering him blind and helpless.

But he knew all about Tommy and couldn't help respecting him in some ways. Another young man might have taken advantage of Celestia's ignorance and innocence. And Stilliter shuddered inwardly to think what a blow that would have been to the great scheme for which he had labored so long.

And he vowed silently that son would never again run such risks. She was in his power once more, and under his protection, and he would have lashed scornfully at any one who might have suggested that within forty-eight hours he would not even know where she was and that she would be in unspeakable danger.

He took off the glasses to polish them and became for a moment as blind as a stone. And that made him shudder. So he polished his glasses as quickly as he could, put them on and once more saw. Then he felt in his pocket to see if this time he had a spare pair with him. He had.

"Nobody," he thought, "will ever catch me with but one pair again."

A man with iron nerves and of great imagination under perfect control, Professor Stilliter had but one weakness—his eyes. Otherwise he was as strong as a bull; but let him once begin to think about his eyes and he became the prey of fearful and wild fancies.

Most men die but once. Professor Stilliter had died a thousand deaths and all of them violent and horrible, and due to a sudden loss of sight. During the preceding night, lying miserably on the hard, rooty ground, he had had a most unpleasant nightmare about himself.

He was alone in the midst of a vast, trackless forest. He was there on scientific business to record the song of a certain very rare bird. But the bird wouldn't sing. It would only laugh. It made a noise like two little children laughing. And it wouldn't show itself. He had followed it half the day. Once he had had a heavy fall and had broken his spare glasses all to smithereens, and had hurt his side quite badly into the bargain.

Now he had stopped to rest; so had the laughing bird. In the forest was the silence of death. Suddenly the bird began to laugh again, and this time the laughter came nearer and nearer. And presently there emerged from the forest into the little open glade in which he stood two children, who held hands and laughed. They were Tommy Barclay and the little Amesbury girl. They walked straight toward him as if they didn't see him. But they must have, for suddenly they stopped and Tommy said:

"Go, you are the man that tried to take her away from me and lock her up in heaven, aren't you?"

Anita Stewart, the inspiring heroine in the great serial, "The Goddess."

"Yes, I am, and what's more, I'll get her this time."

And he lunged at the little Amesbury girl and Tommy simply knocked his glasses off.

He stood still for quite a long time. He could hear the children still laughing as they wandered off into the forest. The laughter grew fainter and fainter.

Then he knelt and began to hunt for his glasses. He hunted until the knees of his trousers were worn through and the small of his back ached like an ulcerated tooth. He hunted slowly and methodically until he felt that he must have covered every square inch of the open glade.

He stood up to rest. According to his calculations he was in the exact middle of the glade, and so, his legs being in need of stretching, he took two or three incautious steps forward and banged his face into the trunk of a tree.

The blow dazed his senses and he leaped backward as if from a living enemy who had struck him, and struck the back of his head against another tree.

After that he cowered for a while on the ground, whimpering and blind—blind as a mole.

Then he began to scream for help. After an hour his screams grew hoarse and faint and presently his vocal cords relaxed and he could no longer make a sound.

So it was to be death, was it? Death in the forest, when he was still in the prime of life! Death because a little boy loved a little girl and always stood up for her! Well, it had to be, and he tried to resign himself to it and be calm.

Suddenly he heard a sound that gave him fresh terrors—many sounds, the sounds of many soft-padded feet converging upon him from three sides over the dead leaves. Closer and closer they came, very slowly, and Stilliter howled back and he leapt to his feet and ran.

Thorns tore his clothes from his body, the flesh from his bones, and the merciless trunks of trees dealt him blow after blow, but still he ran to escape from the thing that had howled.

All at once the ground became firm and even under his flying feet; he no longer encountered trees or bushes. He had escaped from the forest and from the thing that howled. There was still hope for him. He might still live to be the greatest man that had ever lived in the world. And then the next step that he took his feet never touched the ground at all; it just went down and down and head over heels he followed and fell through space.

He woke so frightened that he was half dead in reality. And it took him some time to pull himself together.

Well, the party landed and took up the long trail to Four Corners.

THE GODDESS—the serial Beautiful—written by two famous authors and presented by the Hearst newspapers in collaboration with the renowned Vitagraph Players:

Miss Anita Stewart as the Goddess.
Mr. Earle Williams as Tommy Barclay.

Be sure to read each instalment carefully, and then see the characters and the thrilling incidents spring to life in the motion pictures.

About leaving Tommy with clothes, Stilliter had no compunctions. The young man might suffer. He would undoubtedly catch a frightful cold, but he wouldn't actually die. "He'll swim ashore," Stilliter thought, "and walk naked until he reaches the outskirts of Four Corners. Then he'll hide in a bush and call piteously for help. I wish I could be there to see. The scene should have in it the true essence of comedy."

Stilliter had no beliefs that could be ratified in a scientific way, but he could not altogether explain away the miraculous coincidence of Tommy being the very first person that Celestia should meet.

"Why pick out to meet her woman she comes back, from all the millions who might be the first to meet her, the one person who was in happy when she was taken away? Well, they won't do any more meeting, if I can help it. It really looks as if forces, of which we understand little or nothing, were at work to bring these two together and spoil my plans."

"OH, rot!" retorted Leveredge. "You won't get me to swallow that. However—well, we'll call it off—eh? no love, old chap! Perhaps one day you'll let me into the secret of—well, who knows? I may find it out for myself."

Mrs. Brooke met her husband at Hatchington Station. She had driven there from the Laurels in a smart little runabout, drawn by a sleek, roan colt. She looked radiant and animated, and when she saw that Godfrey was alone a look of undisguised disappointment crossed her face.

Brooke came towards her with his genial face wreathed in a great smile of welcome. If she would have let him he would have taken her proudly in his arms there and then and kissed her, in front of the porters, stationmaster and everyone else.

Back at last little woman," he chuckled delightedly, as he took her arm and pressed it tightly to his side.

"And I'm so glad to be back! It has seemed such a long day!"

She hardly supposed to hear him. Her thoughts were far away.

"So—so Mr. Crawley didn't come with you?" she asked.

"Oh, no—previous engagement, the brute," answered Brooke.

"Isn't he coming down later?" she ventured tremulously.

Brooke shook his head.

"No, he's much too busy with far more important things than taking his fair Eva to the theatre," he muttered, and an angry gleam of color flashed into her face.

How do you know?" she answered, with sudden vivacity.

"I've seen him," answered Brooke, carelessly. "We turned and looked him up. Found I'd finished an hour before. I expected so. I went round and had a look at the picture."

"What picture?" she gasped, stopping dead, facing him suddenly, alarm.

"Why, Crawley's Circe, of course."

His wife stared at him speechlessly. She could not credit the impudence of her person. Godfrey had seen the "Circe"! It was impossible. She refused to believe it.

Before she could say another word, before she had begun to recover from the shock his announcement had caused, he said, in the most matter-of-fact tone in the world:

"And I've bought the picture from Leveredge. It's a big thing, isn't it? I took the first place where it will hang. Good old Crawley! He's got a great future before him. I'm not surprised at his success. He can paint—there's no doubt about that. You ought to get him to paint your portrait, Di. Why not now? You haven't seen the Circe, have you? It's a wonderful piece of work. Eve, by had a pretty model! Lovely creature."

Mrs. Brooke could do nothing but gasp in sheer amazement. She could not trust herself to articulate a word.

Brooke chattered on, unconscious of the effect his words and manner were having upon his wife. He told her of his doings in the city, rambling on in a variety of topics, but he might as well have been talking to a brick wall. She was totally oblivious.

BROOKE ASKS HER TO GO CAREFULLY

It was certainly not due to Mrs. Brooke that they were not upset a dozen times on the drive from the railway station to the Laurels, for she was quite unconscious of the fact that she was holding the reins, and that the sleek little colt was particularly mettlesome, and that the road was rather busy and the light bad.

Brooke, at last, noticed that something was wrong, and he took her hand in his and looked down into her face.

"Di, what's the matter?" he asked. "Are you ill?"

"No, no, dear," she answered, forcing herself to smile. "I'm not ill, only a little tired. I'll be all right after a cup of tea."

"Then you shall have it at once," he said, tenderly. "I'm a selfish brute to worry you with my chatter. Forgive me, dear, won't you?"

"There is nothing to forgive, Godfrey," she answered, and her voice was full of tears.

"Then you shall have your tea at once," he said, and he began to talk of the weather, of the crops, of the prospects of the harvest, of anything and everything that would not require an answer.

Mrs. Brooke was grateful to him for his thoughtfulness, and she began to recover herself. She felt that she must have time to think, to realize what had happened, to decide what she must do.

Godfrey had seen the picture! He had bought it! He had taken it to the Laurels! He had hung it in the drawing-room! He had not yet seen it by daylight! He would see it in the morning!

Her head began to throb with pain, and she felt sick and faint. She could not bear it much longer. She must be alone, she must think, she must decide what to do.

Fortunately, Brooke was so engrossed in his own affairs that he did not notice his wife's distress, and when they reached the Laurels he left her to go to her room, while he went to the library to look through his letters.

Mrs. Brooke went upstairs, and, locking the door of her room, threw herself upon the bed and burst into a passionate flood of tears.

A Man and His Wife

Isabel Receives an Invitation from Her Aunt to Make Her a Visit

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

CHAPTER II.

Copyright, 1915, by the Star Company.

ISABEL was not surprised to find the apartment empty when she let herself in with her latchkey after parting from David Duval. She knew that John would not be at home as early as this. Even though she and her escort had made a detour on their way downtown, Adelaide Simmons would hardly release John yet.

Her glance fell upon a letter lying on the hall table. She recognized the handwriting as that of an aunt living in Denver—the aunt for whom she had been named. A letter from her was no uncommon occurrence, and Isabel carried it listlessly into the little parlor, and turning on the light of the reading lamp sat down in an easy chair to peruse it.

As she read her heart beat faster. Her aunt wrote begging her to come and make her a visit. She appreciated that the trip would be too heavy a strain upon her niece's resources, but she would send her a check to cover the expenses of the journey as soon as she received Isabel's consent to the plan.

"I am lonely, dear, and I have not seen you for a year," the aunt wrote. "Being prepared to stay at least six weeks, the change will do you good, and I know your husband can spare you for a while. He will love you even better, after your return, I know, when we I speak. Every husband appreciates his wife more if he has to get along without her for a time. You wrote me that you have a good maid. Leave her in charge of the apartment and come on to me for a little rest and relaxation."

Isabel read the letter through twice. Then she folded it thoughtfully. "I will write her that I shall be glad to accept her invitation—and check," she said aloud. "John doesn't need me here. Nobody does —unless——"

She stopped abruptly. Could it be possible that she was thinking more of Duvala need of her than of John's? Well, if so, whose fault was it? Had John shown any need of her? Was not David time called him that now in her thoughts she was ready to stand by her. Had he not proved that he cared more for her than John did? But did she care for him more than was right?

She rushed the hair back from her glowing head with both hands as she could not think clearly about her feeling for David. She knew that it was wrong for a married woman to accept the devotion of any man but her husband—she knew also that it was wicked for a wife to feel affection for any man except the man to whom she was married. She had always condemned women who had love affairs with other men. Yet now, as she reasoned out herself at these things, she felt as if her case was different.

Every time they drove close to the brink of a precipice it gave him his own heart will never allow him to the edge. If he saw another man in who he would call him a fool. And he fancies his case different from all others.

SHE IS BETWEEN TWO CONFLICTING EMOTIONS

Perhaps excess of emotion had made it impossible for Isabel to judge herself and her own emotions clearly. All she could realize was that John did not love her and that another woman was ruling him. Well, if she could get away for a while she might understand herself better. Then she would know what to do. She might even decide never to come back. If she could be sure, after thinking of the matter at a distance for some weeks, that John was really tired of her——

There was the sound of a latchkey turning in the lock of the front door. Here was John at home now! She had been sitting buried in her own reflections so long that she had not appreciated the flight of time. She looked up gravely as her husband entered the room.

"Well," he said in greeting. "How are you feeling now? Do you care to come home for a while?"

She glanced at the clock. "Twelve at home for some time," she said. "It is very late."

"I should say it is late!" he agreed. "And I am tired to death. I am awfully sorry, Isabel, that I couldn't get through earlier, but Adelaide had laid out enough work to keep us all going. It was sweet of you to think of calling up and telling me not to come up for tea. Until that minute I had expected to come and, to speak, to you over the phone, but you had gone, or Central had not answered."

"I had gone," the wife replied. "There was nothing more to say, by way, since you were too busy with Mrs. Simmons' work to come to me."

"I would have let the work go long ago, but you managed to get me in a self-justification. "But it was kind of you to think of my comfort."

She did not correct him, did not let him that she knew that Mrs. Simmons had called, nor did she ask him why he had not telephoned. She had no heart for the use of saying all this to him. She thought dully. Not for an instant did she do him the justice to wonder if Adelaide had taken matters into her own hands regardless of John's possible preferences.

"I knew you did not want to come, anyway," she said, rising. "So I had to make the best of what could not be helped."

"You did not come home alone, did you?" her husband asked.

"I came in a cab," she replied. Then she added, "John, I am going away."

JOHN IS ASTONISHED THAT SHE IS GOING

"Going away!" he exclaimed. "What do you mean?"

Was it only her fancy that made her think he had grown a shade paler?

"Aunt Belle has asked me to make her a long visit. She will send me a check for the trip if I will accept the invitation."

He took a step toward her. "And you mean to accept?" he asked, anxiously.

"Yes."

"But," he laid his hand on her arm, "what shall I do without you? I don't mean to be selfish—but how can I get along without you?"

She drew her arm away. "You will probably get along without me just as you did when I was ill the time lately," she said, coldly. "Good-night."

Yet when she tried to sleep that night she wished that she could forget the look that had come into his eyes as she spoke. It reminded her of the look in the eyes of a child whom someone he loves and trusts strikes him.

MAIDEN MEDITATIONS.

The woman who is interested in herself and only herself would fume over a wrinkle in her gown, suffer torments over a wrinkle in her face and placidly ignore the wrinkles and fissures and dents in her character.

If the Valley of Peace could be reached only by the Path of Love, when the persevering traveler arrived, he would find few inhabitants.

When a man fancies himself in love he swears all sorts of thinsby heaven and earth and his own unshakable convictions. If Heaven and earth remain, but some day the man gets a new set of convictions—that's all.

HOW TO BE SLIM

By Winifred Grace Forrest.

If you are too fat and want to reduce your weight 15 or 20 pounds don't starve and weaken your system, or think you must always be laughed at on account of your fat, but go to any good druggist and get a box of Oil of Korein capsules. Take one after each meal and one before retiring at night.

Weigh yourself once a week and note what a pleasant and reliable method this is for removing superfluous fat from any part of the body.

It costs little, is absolutely harmless, and I am sure a week's trial should convince anyone that it is unnecessary to be burdened with even a single pound of unsightly fat.

Resinol

stops itching and burning!

What relief! The first application of Resinol Ointment usually stops all itching and burning and makes your tortured skin feel cool and comfortable at last. Won't you try the easy Resinol way to heal eczema or similar skin-eruption? Doctors have prescribed Resinol regularly for twenty years.

Resinol Ointment, with the help of Resinol Soap, clears away pimples and blackheads and is a most reliable household remedy for cuts, burns, chilblains, etc. Sold by all druggists.

It is believed that the first pineapple forced in England was grown by Charles the Second's own gardener and was cut by the King himself.

It has been found that a hat can absorb and digest in one night food three times the weight of its own body.

Cremation establishments under the control of the Government are to be found in all the chief cities in Japan.

The increase in the use of nitrate of soda has been remarkable. When discovered in 1830, only a few hundred tons were exported from South America; at the present time the exports exceed a million tons a year.

The amount of gold or any other metal coined in Paraguay is so small that it can with safety be entirely excluded from consideration. None whatever is in circulation at this time and the very few coins of Paraguayan origin outstanding are held as curiosities.

Makes Yellow, Bloodshot Eyes Clear and White

If your eyes ever get bloodshot and yellow you can clear them up in half a minute and make them bright and sparkling by dropping a single drop of pure liquid otalite in each eye. This wonderful, lowly cost prescription works and is use is entirely safe as it contains no cocaine, belladonna or harmful drugs of any kind or heroin and it cannot possibly smart or injure the eyes. This prescription is due to be before going out in the evening to make the eyes clear and white. Riker-Jaynes and leading druggists everywhere have it put up and ready for use in 1-ounce bottles at a great many leading eye specialists endorse and recommend this fine prescription and use it in their own practice.—Advertisement.

It's Easy to Peel Off All Your Freckles

The contrast between the freckles and the clear skin usually is so great that no beauty can be more certainly accomplished by erasing the disfigurements. Ordinary mercolized wax is the secret. Literally peels off the freckles, that is some of it as the process is gradual and enough actual to result in complexion gain. Get an ounce of the wax at any drug store, cleanse the skin by washing with warm water. Retreat daily until every freckle has disappeared.

Remember, however, that only skin, also common as this cream, may be entirely gotten rid of in this same method, without discomfort or inconvenience. The effort is decidedly worth while, the new complexion obtained being so clear, smooth and youthful.

If troubled with wrinkles, bathe the face in a lotion made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint of witch hazel. This is the most effective and satisfactory wrinkle treatment known.—Advertisement.

It can't bite your tongue and can't parch your throat, because the bite and the parch are cut out by a patented proce owned exclusively by R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company.

ALE

STERLING ALE

Mighty few good places fail to show the Official Faucet of Sterling Ale. What's the reason?

JUST this—Sterling combines, as no other American ale, downright satisfaction on both sides of the bar. It is palatable to drink. It is profitable to draw. It makes good will every time a nickel passes.

Whether you are a dealer, or just a lover of good ale, there's a share in that good will waiting for you.

I WANT MONEY!

An inventory of my stock finds me with about fifteen hundred yards of David Low's fine tailoring stock yet to be disposed of. No two patterns alike. Tartan Checks, Shepherd Plaids, Glen Urquhart Checks, all the newest colorings that were in his stock. Some sold as high as $35 and $40. This week I intend to make a clean up. I want to turn these goods into money. Quick turns and a very short profit is my way of doing business.

I offer you the services of the highest-priced custom clothing designer in the country, and I will cut, trim and make suit of clothes to your order for the next two weeks, sold by Boston's highest-priced tailor for $30, $35, $40, my price suit to order $9.00

I have made arrangements for sixty-five pieces of United States Worsted Company's high grade Blue Serge, guaranteed sun and salt water proof, absolutely all wool. I make this to your order, and no tailor in town advertises it under $25, my price, three-piece suit to order..... $9.00

ENDS OF WORSTED TROUSERINGS TO ORDER, SOLD AS HIGH AS $6, $7 AND $8, MY PRICE $2.50

I Advise Old Customers to Get in on This Sale and Order Two or Three Suits

WHAT IS GOOD TO EAT IN MARKETS

Green vegetables, native and from the Southern truck gardens, are coming into the Boston market in great quantities and, excepting native asparagus, the prices are right, though asparagus is quite plentiful, the price remains higher than a year ago. Good tomatoes sell for 25 cents a pound, inferior ones have sold for 15c to 18 cents. String beans, cucumbers, beets, carrots and other vegetables are very cheap for the season.

Strawberries are now coming into the market in increasing quantities. Splendid ripe berries sell for 15 cents a box, but crates of berries may be bought for 12½ to 15 cents.

Fresh salted sweetbreads are very cheap, in fact they are much cheaper than the fresh ones. Fresh young turkeys have come into the market for as low as 25 cents a pound, and fresh killed chickens sell for 18 to 25 cents. Dandelions are also selling for 25 cents a pound.

OUR FIRST DUTY IS TO MAINTAIN PEACE; OUR NEXT DUTY IS TO PREPARE FOR WAR

Mr. Storrow Has Set a High Example of Unselfish Public Spirit

The acceptance by Mr. Storrow of the proffered place in the City Council contains two very important points of public interest. It gives evidence that Mr. Storrow's health has sufficiently recovered to warrant his participation again in public affairs and that his public spirit is still strong enough to compel him to make a noteworthy personal sacrifice to render a public service.

There is absolutely no personal advantage in the duties which Mr. Storrow now assumes. The advantage is ALL public.

Some years ago, after a great fiasco in the Legislature, the AMERICAN urged the men of progressive ideas, who had demonstrated their intellectual leadership, to become candidates for the Legislature in order to raise the level of legislative performance. But no important man was willing to make the personal sacrifice which this proposal involved. Now Mr. Storrow has set a high example, which the people of Boston and Massachusetts cannot fail to appreciate.

The AMERICAN wishes Mr. Storrow a continuance of health for many years to come. His health is an important public asset.

Now Is the Time for Directors of Port to Boom Boston as Vacation Mecca

What are the Directors of the Port doing in order to give Boston whatever advantage may be obtained from the great war in Europe?

European travel, in which hundreds of millions of American dollars are spent every year, is now interdicted. People must seek their Summer pleasures at home. Every progressive community will seize this opportunity to present its own special attractions to the vacationist who is confined to our shores.

It ought to be a grateful and profitable task to advertise the unusual attractions of Boston and environs. No place in America combines the lure of history and nature like Boston. Our suburbs, our North and South Shores and harbor trips, the White and Green mountains and the Berkshire hills, all within a day's motoring trip; the great Atlantic, the woods and lakes and streams of New Hampshire and Maine, the historic interests and sights about Boston, will keep any patriotic American busy for the whole period of a European Summer trip and give an infinitely greater variety of things all American.

Are the Port Directors slumbering on their opportunity? The AMERICAN suggests that the Directors wake up, if they are now asleep, and do some real work in this direction. There is a development possibility in every visitor who is attracted to this city.

The work is well within the scope of the Directors' duty and will accomplish infinitely more good to the upbuilding of Boston than their recent compilation concerning Port Development that added nothing save its title to what every report on Harbor Development has told us in the last score of years.

Congressman Deitrick Says Our Rights on High Seas Must Be Maintained

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—I read with pleasure the editorial in the AMERICAN on the subject of the note which the President has sent to the German government with reference to certain acts and practices against which he complains on behalf of our government. I agree with all that was said, that there is much danger to be expected if the German government takes the position that it is justified in using submarines to prevent as far as possible the delivery of goods to England. It is altogether probable that the German government will take this position and deny to our government the right to dictate to just what way Germany will conduct its war before against the allies, with especial reference to England. In this connection I think it is well to bear in mind that we have an equally important claim against the people of Great Britain for her interference with our rights on the high seas, and I am taking the liberty of enclosing herewith a copy of the resolution which I introduced in the Sixty-third Congress concerning certain acts of Great Britain which I felt after careful consideration should be complained about, and recurrence of the same prevented for the future.

Since the filing of this resolution the Kingdom of Great Britain has been guilty of other breaches of international law affecting our rights, and would not hesitate to foment trouble between the United States and Germany. Only yesterday an Englishman stated to me that English negligence was responsible for seventy-five per cent. of the cause of the loss of the Lusitania and that Germany was responsible for twenty-five per cent.

The fact that the complaint of the President has been called forth by the particular instance of the Lusitania does not make it any less important that the other breaches of our rights on the part of other countries, such as Great Britain, should be discontinued at once. The more subtle the influence and the more secret the attempt to violate our rights, requires that our action should be severe and prompt in order to insure our stand as a nation on the high seas.

Yours respectfully,
F. S. DEITRICK.

Once-Overs

Look out for the man who is constantly drawing attention to the weaknesses of others. Invariably he has a lot to cover up himself.

Are you helping to circulate reports of the frailties of your neighbor? Perhaps you think that your deficiencies are not known, but are you sure that you are not as weak or peculiar as your neighbor, though, perhaps, in a different way? Are there not as many holes in your character as there are in his?

Better for you to present some of the good points and features of the one under discussion if you do not want him to snow up some of your bad points some day. You have them. Everybody has them. We are all human and the perfect man does not exist.

Where Are the Old-Fashioned Folks?

By Winifred Black

HAS the old-fashioned father begun to disappear?

Billy Sunday says the old-fashioned mother has gone, and Dr. Henry Newman of the Brooklyn Ethical Culture Society supplements Mr. Sunday's statement by saying that the father has lost his old ideas and that he depends too much upon the mother for the training of the children.

I wonder if these things are true, both of them, and if the fact that they are true is the reason that the old-fashioned daughter and the old-fashioned son are disappearing, too?

For they are; there's no doubt of that, not a doubt in the world.

Where's the old-fashioned son who started out at eighteen to make his own living, and send home a dollar or so to help Ma get a new black silk for Sunday and Pa to buy a new cultivator for the forty acres in the old wood lot?

Going to college, of course, and joining fraternities, and spending more money in a month than his father spends in a year.

Where's the same boy at twenty-three? Spending his Summers at the seasons and his Autumns in the mountains and his Springs in Florida and his Winters learning the new dances and telling his mother what she really must do to get his sister into really smart society.

Where's sister, who ought to be the old-fashioned daughter?

At home, making angel cake for mama's tea parties? Or the piazza embroidering dollies for Aunt Susie's birthday? In the garden cutting roses for the table? Upstairs mending father's socks? Downstairs pressing out brother's neckties?

Not at all.

She's in college, too, learning all about Hector and Priam, and higher mathematics and the difference between astrology and astronomy.

Or she's out of college; she's in a settlement somewhere showing somebody's else mother how to keep house and telling her what to do when the baby has the croup and going down to jail to bail somebody else's husband out, so he'll be able to keep the family going.

Or, if she isn't in a settlement, she has a studio somewhere and is leading the literary life of painting pictures or planning suffrage parades; anywhere, doing anything, so she won't have to stay at home.

Mother is delighted.

The only one of the family she doesn't quite approve of is father.

Father is so mercenary, so humdrum, so reactionary.

Why, he doesn't even know what you mean when you say that a thing is bourgeoise, and as for "sabotage," he never even heard of it. She and her son are a good deal embarrassed over father's attitude toward the world in which they live.

Father is puzzled, and sometimes he'd be old-fashioned, plain American mad about it all if he dared.

But what's the use?

The old-fashioned father? There isn't any!

He's gone out with the old-fashioned mother who made jelly and had chicken salad for Sunday night lunch, and thought it was important to remember what sort of tarts father preferred and whether he liked the dressing in the turkey made with oysters or with chestnuts.

The old-fashioned mother has gone out with the old-fashioned son, who wouldn't let a man light a cigar in the presence of his mother and who would as soon think of jumping off the roof as telling a risque story to his sister.

The old-fashioned sister has gone out, too. She tells risque stories herself, and the language she uses when she's excited about a "cause" would make an old-fashioned brother sit up nights to worry over her.

I wonder if the old-fashioned father and mother, who brought up their old-fashioned families in the old-fashioned way, really did some rather good work in the world after all?

A Letter from Professor Zueblin

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—Boston enjoys the advantage of an indeterminate franchise, by which it has the power of disciplining its street railway system. It has the added advantage of a municipally owned subway which the railway company must use. The regulation which is next to impossible in New York and Pittsburgh is easy in Boston. It is legally easier than it is in some western cities that are managing their transportation services better. Boston has achieved a very creditable unification of railway services which is quite as important as a low fare. It is, however, a reflection on the intelligence of the people of Boston that a feeler should be put forth to see how the public will take a six-cent fare.

It is perfectly easy to demonstrate that a street railway system in a metropolitan city which cannot operate profitably on a five-cent fare is grossly mismanaged. The mouthpiece of the incompetent management says: "The general high-cost-of-living has affected the railways as much as private businesses and higher wages have been paid to the employes," but naively adds: "In addition to this, the railways as a whole have failed to provide for the depreciation of their property. The current revenue has been found to be insufficient to make up for that depreciation."

Every city in America that has undertaken to deal with its transportation service in a scientific way has met this same difficulty. The public is expected to pay for the misdeeds or ignorance of the transportation authorities. Enlightened cities will no longer endure this beggarly method. When Chicago granted its new franchises because legislation prevented municipal ownership it secured a claim on the railway revenues to the amount of 55 per cent. of the net receipts after interest and depreciation were cared for. Thus Chicago has already accumulated $16,500,000 to purchase the system that has made the contribution. Detroit would have municipal ownership if it were not for State limitations on the city's power. In the face of colossal difficulties it is about to municipalize the street railways, although the company has offered to give six tickets for twenty-five cents at any hour, and ten tickets for a quarter in the rush hours. This proposal was considered so illiberal in a city that has long enjoyed eight tickets for a quarter morning and evening that the people voted down the company's proposal, 20,000 to 14,000. The only thing that can stop municipal ownership in Detroit is a straight three-cent fare.

Press dispatches are constantly so misleading that it is well to remind the people of Boston of Cleveland's three-cent fares. Cleveland's fares are based upon actual cost of transportation, so that, unless there is a sufficient surplus, one cent may be charged for a transfer, which is the case momentarily. This is due in Cleveland to the necessity of rehabilitating a system like that of Boston that has not provided for depreciation. As soon as the present management overcomes the reckelessness and extravagance of Tom Johnson's old enemies Cleveland will undoubtedly have a universal three-cent fare. Meanwhile, a Bostonian feels very comfortable in depositing three pennies in a box or buying five tickets for fifteen cents for most of his rides in Cleveland.

The franchise granted to Columbus, Ohio, is like that of the Boston Gas Company. It is conditioned on receipts. Originally, the people of Columbus were given seven tickets for a quarter at all hours of the day. The fare was to be reduced to eight tickets for a quarter when the gross annual receipts amounted to $1,750,000. That has now taken place, and automatically, in response to efficient management, under the spur of dividends, the people enjoy almost the equivalent of a three-cent fare.

In the face of these and multiplied experiences the demand for a six-cent fare in Boston is both a confession of incompetence and an insult to the intelligence of the people of Boston. While Boston's system is happily unified, its franchise for privileges are very inadequate. Under complete municipal ownership there is not the slightest doubt that six tickets could be sold for a quarter with universal trafsfers. A demand for more than that among a sophisticated people would lead promptly to the municipal ownership of the entire system.

Lack of Thoroughness a Fault in Women

Ella Wheeler Wilcox Deplores Inability of Many Well-Educated Persons to Grasp Meaning of Clearly Expressed Statements—Cites Recent Experience With Divorced Wives

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1915, by the Star Company.

LACK of thoroughness is one of woman's greatest faults.

It is a surprising fact that few women who read are able to correctly state the meaning of sentences which have been clearly expressed by the author. Over and over the proof of this statement has been brought to the attention of the writer of this article.

Not many weeks ago an article appeared on this page regarding the alimony of divorced wives. The statement was most distinctly made that the mothers of children should receive money from their divorced husbands for the support of these children; but it was further stated, and is now repeated, that the woman who is not a mother (and whose health has not been destroyed by indulgence and luxury), lowered her dignity and her self respect in allowing a divorced husband to support her.

Special stress was placed upon the point that divorced women, who exploited themselves in public and carried on romantic affairs with other men while being supported by their divorced husbands, dishonored their own sex and disgraced the name of womanhood.

This article has brought loud complaints from many divorced wives, almost invariably bringing up the point that they possessed children and they saw no reason why the fathers of these children should not support them.

Why are women so inaccurate and inattentive when reading!

Before they waste time, temper, stationery and postage stamps in writing a protest regarding an article, why do they not read it carefully and discover whether there is cause for the protest? One woman writes that she has been married twenty-three years to a man who began to spend his time and money in saloons during the honeymoon and has never discontinued the habit.

She has borne him a family of children, and performed all sorts of labor to help maintain the home, which he has rendered little better than a purgatory. Now she is suing her husband for divorce and alimony for the support of these children.

This is quite right and just. A man should support his own children, but the fact remains a fact, nevertheless, that a higher and finer order of woman should be indicated when a wife refuses to be supported by the husband whom she does not respect sufficiently to live with.

There is something shocking and even more than shocking in the prevalence of fashionably attired and flirtatious divorcees, who are paying their bills through alimony.

The wife of a continual drunkard commits a sin when she continues to live with him and produce offspring. An orphan asylum is a better home for children than the home continually frequented by a drunken father.

Fortunately for the world and for the human race alcoholism is on the wane. One of the greatest events which ever occurred in the uplifting of the race has occurred during this terrible war in the abolition of drink from Russia. The edict and its immediately beneficial results have set the whole world thinking, and the temperance wave is touching it shores.

In the days of George Washington, the father of our country, drunkenness was fashionable. It is now a disgrace, and the drunken man, either in clubs, drawing room, hotels or on the public streets, is less and less in existence. Our schools are doing much in this respect to help eradicate the evil; children are being taught the injurious effects of alcohol on the human system, and the new generation will grow up with a scientific understanding of the subject which will be, in itself, a protection.

The whole idea of the world seems changing on the subject of drink. In a medical magazine, Dr. T. D. Crothers writes a very interesting article entitled "Medical Abstainers Called For."

The following extracts from his article would be of universal interest: "Drinking families who have wine served at the table are beginning to call for total abstaining physicians and drop the convival doctor who is ever ready to join them in the social glass.

"A financier who left a large sum of money to a hospital suddenly withdrew his legacy. When pressed for an explanation he declared that many of the staff of the hospital were drinking men, and their work would necessarily be inefficient and careless, and in the business world he would not put in any money where drinking men would have any kind of control. It was too risky.

"He would renew his legacy, with great additions, if the hospital authorities would accept it with the provision that all members of the staff should be total abstainers. This has been under consideration for the last year.

"The president of a railroad company found his wife at a seaside resort being treated by a very eminent expert. At the table he noticed that this physician ordered a bottle of wine and later he saw him take a drink in the barroom. He discharged him at once, and when questioned by his friends answered: 'I should not allow a switchman or a towerman on my road to use spirits, and I have given orders that they be discharged the minute they are found guilty. How much more important it is that I should guard my family from the dangers of this source.'

"Incidents like these are increasing all over the country. Medical men trained to give the best service on health matters are called for. The unhealthy, the beer-drinking, the alcoholic and tobacco-smelling doctors repel the intelligence of the man or woman who is looking for ideals. There is no sentiment in this, and it may not be expressed, but it is growing constantly."

Is not this encouraging for the world?

Illusions

By Jane McLean

THEY will not go the while you, clinging to them,
Hold them against your breast;
Out of a world of gray and sodden sorrows,
Tear wet, they bring you rest.

They will not go; they linger in the byways.
Crooning your world with song,
Strewing your path ahead with glowing roses
Lest it seem long

They will not go, for often in the twilight
They will surprise you there,
Soothing your fevered brow with small, cool fingers.
Calming your deep despair.

They will not go till you shall push them from you,
Seeking a meaning plain;
Then banished they will slip away forever,
Leaving you pain.
